This credit reporting policy applies to Air Liquide Australia Limited (ABN 57 004 385 782), Air Liquide Healthcare Pty Ltd (ABN 41 002 653 045), Healthy Workplace Solutions Pty Ltd (ABN 35 121 729 584) (trading as Healthy Sleep Solutions) and Air Liquide New Zealand Limited (NZBN 9429032036121) ("Air Liquide", "we", "us" or "our"), and details how we, as credit providers, collect, use and disclose your credit-related personal information. Our handling of credit-related personal information is regulated by privacy laws and credit reporting requirements.

If you would like to request a copy of this policy in another form, please contact us at the details below.

Types of credit-related personal information

Air Liquide may collect, hold, use and disclose the following types of credit-related personal information about you:

- identification information, such as your name, address, driver's licence number and/or other similar information;
- information about your business, trading history, references and corporate, partnership or trustee information (as relevant to you);
- information about your past experiences with us and other credit providers, such as the kinds of credit products you have had or sought and how you have managed your obligations, and other information about your financial position and personal circumstances; and
- any other information which you provide to us or others provide to us on your behalf (e.g. references from your referees).

Air Liquide collects credit-related personal information about you in various ways including when you provide such information directly to us (such as when you complete a credit application form) or where provided by credit reporting bodies ("CRBs"), our service providers (e.g. identity verification providers), our related companies, and other third parties or publicly or commercially available sources. Your credit-related personal information is stored in physical and electronic form and protected by procedural and technical security safeguards.

Purpose

The credit-related personal information Air Liquide collects from you or about you is necessary for our business and we collect, use, hold and disclose it for purposes permitted under privacy laws and credit reporting requirements, including:

- verifying your identity;
- assessing your application(s) for credit and establishing and administering your credit account;
- considering any other application made by you to us for goods or services;
- conducting appropriate checks for credit-worthiness, credit standing and/or credit capacity;
- obtaining credit reports from credit reporting bodies (including through a consumer and/or commercial credit report from a credit reporting body) to assess an application(s) for credit;
- providing you with products, services, and/or credit you have requested and/or (to the extent permitted under privacy laws and credit reporting requirements) with information which we consider may be of interest to you;

- administering and managing our products, services and credit, including charging, billing and collecting debts;
- exercising any of our powers or performing our obligations under personal property securities legislation, such as registering security interests;
- for our internal operations including record keeping, risk management and analysis, complaint handling, planning and quality assurance and audit purposes;
- undertaking customer relations, including management of our relationship with you and market or customer satisfaction research and product development;
- making arrangements with other organisations to provide services in relation to our goods and services (e.g. we may arrange for mailing houses to distribute invoices and statements to customers, data or internal financing or legal management, back up or secure keeping);
- participating in the credit reporting system (more details below);
- giving any report, copy of any agreements or other documents or information about you to any person who has or will guarantee the repayment of credit provided to you; and
- as required, authorized or prescribed by relevant laws and regulations.

Disclosure to Credit Reporting Bodies

From time to time, Air Liquide may disclose your credit-related personal information to CRBs for purposes permitted under privacy laws and credit reporting requirements. For example:

- If you request credit from us, we may check your identity and/or request a credit report about you from a CRB; and
- If you fail to meet your payment obligations in relation to credit provided by us (e.g. if you miss or are late with payments, your payments are dishonoured or you commit defaults) or if you commit a serious credit infringement, we may disclose such information to a CRB.

You should be aware that a CRB may include information provided by us in reports provided to other credit providers to assist them to assess your credit worthiness.

You have special rights under privacy laws and credit reporting requirements in relation to dealings with CRBs such as:

- you may request from a CRB its policy on how it manages your personal information;
- you may request a copy of the credit information that a CRB holds about you and request correction of that information;
- CRBs can use your credit-related personal information for a pre-screening assessment at the request of a credit provider. However, if you are in Australia, if you do not want a CRB to use your credit-related personal information for the purpose of pre-screening, you have the right to ask the CRB to exclude you; and
- if you reasonably believe that you have been or are likely to be a victim of fraud including identity-related fraud, you can request the CRB not to use or disclose credit-related personal information the CRB holds about you.
